The PPM Verbal Comprehension test is a good predictor and measurement of attainment. It assesses the ability to understand increasingly complex vocabulary. It should be noted that people whose first language is not English may well achieve scores that are lower than would be the case if the words were in their first language.

The test taker had a raw score of 39 of a possible 60 points, and answered 60 of 60 questions.

The table below shows the percentile ranking for this score compared to three different comparison groups.

General Population	Working Population	Professional Manager
95%ile	90%ile	40%ile
